

081-AFD

Preliminary Investigation on the Impact of Missile Design on its Aerodynamic Features

Mahmoud M. Abdel-Fattah and Ahmed E. Hassan

Department of Aerospace Engineering, Military Technical College, Cairo, Egypt

Supervisor: Dr. Mahmoud Y. M. Ahmed

Department of Aerospace Engineering, Military Technical College, Cairo, Egypt, mahmoud.yehia@mtc.edu.eg

The dependence of aerodynamic features of a conventional missile on its configuration is examined. The features in concern are the zero-lift drag coefficient, the lift-curve slope and the center of pressure location. These coefficients are estimated using a home-made reliable tool that is used for conceptual design and preliminary sizing of rockets of simple shapes.